Clarence Johnson was master of ceremonies, and immediately after a stirring patriotic selection by the loud speaker, he announced that the occasion was for the unveiling of the flag from the service plaque.

The plaque containing a list of 156 names, with spaces provided for others, is about 7 feet long and 3½ feet high, together with and 3½ feet high, together with the standard making it 8 feet high. The letters are about an inch in heighth. The design and the lettering was done by Miss Thelma Hubbell of the Hobby Shop. It is a work of art and no doubt will stand for many years.

O TIRE SWITCHING is a common sense practice at any time. Now it's vitally important. It's the very basis of longest life for your set of tires. For no two tires will wear at the same rate on your car, and your hope is to keep them all in service. But do you know when to switch tires . . . and to which position?

Have your Standard Oil Dealer supply the right answer with his new wartime method of switching tires. He will "gauge" you tires with a special measuring instrument, Standard Oil Dealers' Tire Mileage Gauge Then he will place each tire where it will give the most service. Have this repeated every 2500 to 5000 miles (older tires at 2500) o get maximum mileage from the set.

This was the most important game of the season. So much degame of the season. So much de-pended on it. The Bears had taken the lead from the Black Sox in this, the seventh inning, but the Sox had lost more than their three-run lead in that in-ning. Johnson, their star pitcher had failed to come through and had given up five runs in a single inning; with those five runs went most of the team's hopes and most of the team's nopes and determination. There, wasn't much use in hoping or being determined either when there wasn't another pitcher available who could save that game! It was a pretty discouraging situa-tion, and the dejected Sox sauntered slowly off the field. It was easy to see that they'd fought a losing battle. They would drop out of first place, which they held by the slim margin of onehalf game, to the Bears who were already assured of their magnificent triumph in this decisive game of a mad pennant race.

These were the fragments of thought that were running thru Manager Gene Ford's mind as he watched his men walk off the field. Then the thought that had been bothering him all during that inning invaded once again. Would he dare? mound, threw a few range-finders Could he send Jomie Martin in?

he couldn't do that, so he just kept on walking Memories, memories, sad ones, bitter ones, triumph ones were clamoring through his brain in that long walk from the bull pen to the dugout. "Jomie Martin Number 11, now pitching for the Black Sox," the public address system blared forth. An unmistakable murmer of astonishment went over the packed stadium. He had reached the dugout now, and the players on the bench and those just going out to take their places on the field stared at him in wide-eyed amazement. No one knew what to say to him. A few wasn't managed to give him a casual greeting, but most of them just looked at him, shrugged their shoulders, and walked away.

Gene Ford extended his hand to Jomie, "Don't fail us now, kid; we're counting on you," he pleaded. Jomie's lip quivered a little. "But all those people, Gene, they still remember; they still hold it against me, even the players

Gene Ford came to see him once in awhile, but only to encourage the boy to get started in some other field of work, but Jomie would not hear of it, after having several operations on his arm, a new glint of hope came into his life. He worked many long, patient hours in his desperate endeavor to restore life to the inactive muscles. Then, after almost three years of constant effort, it seemed as if his hard determination had been rewarded; he was able to pitch again! When Gene Ford came to see him again, he persuaded him to give him a chance. Since Ford was half owner of the club, it was possible for him to take Martin on, as a free agent without consulting anyone on the deal. Ford did not want anyone to know that he intended to give Jomie a chance because the place would be swarming with reporters—and if he didn't click, the less publicity, the better. That was how Jomie happened to be there now.

Jomie quickly brought his thoughts up to the present, he looked the batter over, took his stretch, came down to the clutch and delivered the pitch; a ball. Then another one, still another. Three and nothing the You've got to come through You've got to come through' kept echoing in his ears. He took his time on the next one and slipped it over for a called the field on their shoulders. ITS real puzzlin' when you stop to think about it ...

I mean the way the human race has worked out a whole set of cut-an'-dried alibis for its misdeeds and shortcominge.

Some of them's harmless alibis —like the office boy's grandmother who always passes away just be-fore the big baseball game.

Here's some others. "My alarm clock didn't go off." "I left my money in my other suit"—"I was settin' up with a sick friend." . . .

And then the one about the two beers. Now that one is downright exasperatin'. Because there's not a shred of truth in it. Every once in a while I read in the papers about some ornery cuss, who never did know the meanin' of noderation, gettin' himself into
